Dear Sir or Madam
My husband and I have an allotment on Eastney Lake and I have seen a map of the areas that Aquind might need to gain access to the plots. I understand that Aquind would remove everything from a plot if they need to gain access.
We are having a new shed put on our plot, which is a necessity as the existing shed is beyond repair. [redacted], and hence are having to pay a company to remove the old shed and erect the new shed. This is costing us in the region of £500.
Our plot may be near the area marked on the map.
I hope that Aquind would compensate any plot holders if they need to gain access. We will keep our receipt as proof of the money spent.
However, many plot holders have long established fruit trees and other plants which can take several years before producing a crop - for example asparagus beds.
This is all very concerning, and I hope that surface access is not necessary.
Regards
