To whom it may concern,

I am keen to state that I am not anti-nuclear, nor a "NIMBY". I want to raise specific concerns about the negative impact that the proposed Sizewell C power plant will have.

I am a resident of Leiston, a town two miles from the Sizewell campus (I can see Sizewell B from my garden, for context). At the moment, I don't mind living near the plant at all – someone has to. I would not mind about the construction of more power plants, were EDF's specific plans for Sizewell C not so shoddy. It seems that the building of Sizewell C will negatively impact: the lives of local residents; wildlife; our coastal defences; tourism to the Area of Natural Beauty among many other things.

I am most concerned, however, about the proposed cost of the project (and that the public has yet to be told who will fund it), as well as the fact that the project will take – a decade or more to complete. In light of our climate emergency, we simply do not have the time or resources to fund this mega project. EDF have a poor track record – why not invest the money in renewable energy sources that will contribute to the UK's net-zero goals (Sizewell C will not start contributing until 2040)?

Yours faithfully,

Georgia Platman
