Try as I might, I cannot find any good reason for this project to go ahead.

- the building of the EPR is massively behind time in Finland, and in France the problems are legion.

So we are starting from a minus.

- too late for mitigating climate change

- massive backend of radioactive waste

- Minsmere is a stone's throw away

- eroding coastline

- massive influx of workers, not necessarily from the area, affecting locals' lives

- clogged up roads

- vast capital spend that will get greater as time goes on, picked up by the taxpayer

- concerns over accidents where a great swathe of East Anglia could be affected

I could go on....
