Visions for a brighter future

Positive plans ahead for our major town centres

Jennifer Logan
Senior reporter
middy.news@pimedia.co.uk

Exciting plans for our town centres have been unveiled.

Mid Sussex District Council will meet today to discuss its masterplan for Haywards Heath, setting out a range of options to improve the town including a multi-storey carpark, more leisure facilities, making South Road more attractive to shoppers, pedestrianising The Broadway and altering the Muster Green gyratory.

Meanwhile in Burgess Hill, an initiative to promote new sustainable businesses has been launched, bringing an empty unit back into use at The Martlets. Town council leader Robert Eggleston negotiated favourable leases from NewRiver, which is behind the town centre's development plan. He said: "We have no control over the redevelopment and cannot say when, or if, it will happen. But what we can do is bridge the gap and give opportunities to local entrepreneurs and support the local economy through incredibly difficult circumstances."

Fears for ancient bridleway Battle against cycle path plans

Plans to create a new cycleway from Burgess Hill to Haywards Heath have prompted a fierce backlash from residents who say the Theobalds Road bridleway should be left as it is, and protected. Campaigners claim the proposal to widen the path for cyclists would 'destroy the natural, unspoiled, ancient historic character of the bridleway and its ecology forever'.

Free support service is launched in Mid Sussex

Jennifer Logan
Senior reporter
middy.news@pimedia.co.uk

St Peter & St James Hospice has launched Community Reach, a free emotional support service to tackle isolation and loneliness in Mid Sussex.

The much-loved local charity has launched the expert support service to help people across the community who may be experiencing loneliness or emotional distress due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Community Reach, which has been funded by the government and the National Lottery Community Fund, offers people the opportunity to access free counselling or caller companion support from qualified and expertly trained hospice volunteers.

The service is open to anyone who feels they are struggling with increased isolation, or who has been directly affected by Covid-19 through family illness, bereavement and loss.

Chris Horton, head of wellbeing and outreach at St Peter & St James Hospice, said: "There is widespread
