Dear Planning Inspectors,

EA1N & EA2 SUBSTATION SITE

The proposed sites around Friston for the substations have now been sterilised in that they have been chemically treated to prevent anything from growing on them. Random diggers are scattered around the landscape working away at their investigations. Traffic road signs line the roads into and out of the village, warning us to be careful. The scene looks like something from a dystopian film after an apocalyptic occurrence except that this is not an imagined place, this is real. The barren landscapes have exposed the vastness of the proposal and it's lifeless state is only a foreshadowing of what's to come.

I know you have been to the site several times. It is well worth seeing now as uncultivated land. It's the best impact assessment you can have.

Yours sincerely,
