Dear Sir, Madam,

Below are a couple of photographs taken on a beautiful October evening showing the area where Scottish Power are intending to cover thirty acres with steel and concrete.

They are seeking permission to put a substation on this spot so that they can feed energy generated by wind farms off the Suffolk coast into the main grid. They call this green energy as it is produced by natural wind power.

How can this possibly be green energy when vast swathes of the beautiful Suffolk countryside are to be sacrificed to enable this "green energy" to be utilised.

It is felt that in the years to come and energy is more efficiently produced, decisions to spoil these areas will be regretted. Please consider very carefully because once this beautiful scenery is gone it will never be replaced and the government are trying to save these areas not destroy them.

The energy companies care about two things. Keeping up with demand and how much money they can make in doing so.

They must be made to come up with better procedures and ruining our countryside and losing land to grow crops will not and cannot be tolerated.

Please stop this situation now.

Yours

Carolyn Ridgeon
