Dear Examiners ,

I just wanted to find out if National Grid has committed to attend the ISHs for EA1N & EA2 as people are saying otherwise.

As we know there is more to the National Grid substation than just these 2 proposals and National Grid have not been held to account and have been using these proposals as a Trojan Horse, it is hard to understand how a National Grid substation is not an NSIP in its own right and should surely require a proper statutory community consultation.

I am confused, please can you advise on the situation and the following questions:

- Is it not the case that the National Grid substation should undergo a fair and transparent consultation?
- Or, are National Grid somehow exempt from requiring planning or a DCO for their infrastructure?
- At the very least one would have thought National Grid must provide a presence and be available to be questioned about their plans?

Kind regards,

Nicholas Thorp
