Dear Sirs

Re: ScottishPower's plan for the Inland 'Substation' at Friston

I wish to protest at the way ScottishPower is seeking to gag landowners with compulsory statutory powers and is offering local Councils large sums of money in order to facilitate their permission to destroy large sections of the east Suffolk countryside in order to build a huge substation at Friston.

Equally If this is an open review of the effects that this substation will make on the local countryside, not only on its wildlife but also on many local businesses who will have their livelihoods destroyed, why have scottishPower put up lots of road signs suggesting that permission has been granted when the actual fact is you, as Secretary of State have only given them extra time for "Proper Consultation".

While we all appreciate the need for green energy, why is this Conservative Government allowing foreign companies to destroy our countryside and not waiting for the BEIS Review.

Green energy should not be destroying the environment and this Government should not be letting it happen.

yours faithfully

S. Thompson
