To the Planning Officer concerned

The more information we get about the Substation the size of the proposed site at Necton is really scary. How on earth can anyone in their right mind think that this is the right place for something so large and extremely industrial. They need to get an ORM up and running and not just looking at it on paper. It is no good saying it is being considered and that it will come too late for Vattenfall structures because, as has been said, if an ORM is agreed, both projects should finish about the same time and therefore the substation will have been totally unnecessary and a blight on Norfolk villages forever. Planning must be thought out properly as human rights to a good quality of life for the local villages must be forefront to any decision made.

They are the experts so I am sure they can work it out if they really, really want to and make it work for everyone.
