Dear Sirs,

I wish to register my strong objection to the enormous Cleve Hill project.

I am all for renewable energy but the scale of it and ugliness of the panels shows it has not been planned sensitively. This is not a wasteland but valuable marshland that we cannot afford to lose. For the sake of our birds and other wildlife we must preserve it. This South East corner of England already has plenty of on and off shore wind power, and some solar power. Cleve Hill will further blight this part of the country. We love and wish to preserve the precious natural beauty of the area, where the fast-growing population is already having an impact on the landscape. Please consider reducing the shocking size of this solar farm and find a spot where the detrimental impact will be less obvious.

Sincerely,

Nicole Tibbels
