To whom it may concern

I do not understand why Sunnica did not have all this sorted beforehand. If us mere mortals apply for planning permission for building we need to have the I's dotted & the T's crossed before we apply or it gets thrown out. Why should Sunnica with such a huge application be any different? If they are this unorganised at this stage goodness knows what may happen long-term with such a potentially dangerous operation.

Why should we be forced to wait even longer than first stated to find out if permission will be granted for this potentially hazardous operation which seems to be run by people who are unable to organise basic management?

The lasting affects on the villages and countryside will be devastating , affecting businesses and home owners not to mention our farming fraternity, whom during the current world food crisis will be unable to provide the food we need because their land will be taken away from production.

I strongly object to an extension for the above reasons.
