Dear Sirs

We object to the recent request as this would put the process in the middle of summer holiday period, when residents are more likely to find it hard to look at the amendments.

The short time extension seems very short for such major changes to be put in place and for these to be communicated fully with those effected.

On a personal note this extra time will mean that the effect of the project on life choices will have to be extended yet again, causing anxiety and insecurity to our family.

Regards Richard and Tracey Minshull
