It's obvious that the developers of this proposal are dragging this out for as long as possible to deter those who do not want this awful proposal to go ahead. The world is in turmoil and we need to be more self sufficient, this applies not just to energy but food as well. East Anglia is prime agricultural land and should be kept solely for that purpose. Any energy schemes should be granted on the condition that they go under the ground or out at sea.

The people who live here know the worth of the land and what needs to be preserved for future generations. This constant ruining of the countryside is both obscene and short-sighted. Listen to the public for goodness sake.
