

The development is too large, far greater than any other similar development taking up prime agricultural land. We are an island nation already importing food at a high cost together with the carbon footprint that goes with it.

Local habitat would be greatly affected, during and after the development.

The company concerned is reported to be of a questionable nature, both by its registered offices, its ownership and its business ethics. It is understood those involved in the business have a poor track record. Further it is understood the supply chain may involve the use of forced labour.

Finally, the development would have a high detrimental impact on the area both during and after construction especially on the village of Essindine.
