

At this late stage there are simply too many unresolved and important issues relating to the basic elements of this proposal that have not been resolved. It would be irresponsible to make a decision without a clear understanding of the impact this proposal will have on individuals and the community. One should ask themselves why these issues are not resolved after so much time and consideration. A flawed and inadequate plan regarding Network Rail and Lincolnshire and Rutland Counties' road systems should have been the first elements of the plan to be resolved. The Secretary of State should do the right thing and delay the decision until these matters are resolved.
