

This is one of many of the solar farm schemes happening all linking to the same power station, it should be obvious i would think that the developers are working together? Opting for the broad brush approach in applying for 5 different schemes all close together, and should 4 get rejected but 1 is approved, everyone is seen as winning. It's a clear tactic and if the schemes are being judged individually and not as a collective this will very possibility be the case. But the residents will still loose out, however you view it. Please view this as a collective submission, rather than the scatter gun approach they are trying to get away with.