

Submission ID: 19549

As a trained agriculturalist qualified at Harper Adams University I am deeply opposed to the use of this extensive area of productive land for solar panels. Following the Second World War it became essential to develop more productive agricultural practices when food rationing had been imposed. It is extremely short sighted to over look the requirement for food security.