

Solar panels should not be placed on fertile agricultural food producing land, but on top of buildings. We need to be self sufficient and import less food. This gold rush to bag land is fueled by grants and financial reward, giving no regard to the impact on rural communities both mentally, physically and financially. The huge number of these Solar projects continually targeting the same area must surely be ringing alarm bells. The damage caused by the ground solar power plants will outway any benefit these companies are hoping they may achieve, but it is clearly not of importance to them.