

The potential for over 7000 acres in this area for solar farms is both disproportionate and ill conceived. This is a rural community where agriculture is a predominant sector and the loss of agricultural land is reduces the ability of the country to be self sufficient in food.

The government recently announced the aim of reducing solar farms on agricultural land and instead use commercial properties and wind power.

Each area of the county should accept its share of solar do not concentrate so much in one area.

The size of these projects including Cottam Solar is just too much in this area with the majority of people against it.

Let them use brownfield sites not waste good agricultural land resultin in the importation of more food to the country.
