

The cumulative impact of these enormous solar farms will, without doubt, have an overwhelmingly negative outcome for people living in the area.

These solar farms are too dense, too large, too close together, too imposing for communities who have to live surrounded by them.

These solar farms have nothing to do with progress, or zero emissions. Clearly, such planning is to maximize the fortunes, the profits, of those companies and individuals involved whilst ignoring how development on such a scale will diminish any sense of well-being or quality of life for the people left to suffer the consequences of such greedy planning.
