

The extent of these developments is utterly monstrous. Cumulatively these solar farms will impact our quality of life and will industrialise vast tracts of the countryside forever. The concept is flawed and there are clearly alternative forms of power generation that could be adopted and that will preserve the countryside for agriculture and recreation. It's all about £££ since the connectivity is close to the existing coal-fired power stations. The conversion from coal to solar is creating major issues and needs to be rethought and re-appraised.
