I feel the government are making a big mistake if they allow the Cottam scheme.

We will be losing our food security but also allowing private companies to control our energy security it is wrong and when new technology appears and ground solar is deemed not viable by these private companies they will simply go bankrupt having made their money and us the tax payers will have to try and sort this environmental disaster the UK economy is in a bad enough state without further problems down the line I feel if this is past it is reckless behaviour by a government obsessed with net zero in my opinion
