Good morning

With regard to the proposed the Tillbridge solar panel project I would like to protest in the strongest possible terms to the wholesale destruction of viable farmland, rural communities and the countryside managed by farmers.

The scale of these developments is out of all proportion to the possible benefits. I am shocked that some working group in parliament feel they can impose this without a referendum. The change is so vast and unimaginable the ramifications on farming, wildlife habitats and mental well-being of communities are incalculable.

These solar developments will only have a limited viability as GB is largely cloudy and they will not have a huge impact on energy production.

As I understand it the panels will be produced in China and are not recyclable. Where will these be put once their useful life is over?

These projects need much closer scrutiny than is currently being given.
