

My mum is ■ years old and lives in a property that will be surrounded on all side by 4m high solar panals. It would be nice to think that her remaining years at wood farm will remain to be the quiet tranquil place, she has lived and brought up her family. And not have to spend her last years watching the surrounding countryside disappear under acres and acres of glass. And listening to the constant sound of construction in place of bird song. The need to secure our food production should be our prime objective. There is a place for solar panals. But it's not on farm land. These solar farms are about big business making lots of money. Not saving the planet.
