

it is well noted that the lack of robust engagement suggests that the consultation process was not thorough or genuinely community-centered, falling short of the standards for meaningful communication and engagement.