To whom it may concern:

I can't believe that people still think that the Aquind Interconnector landing in Portsmouth is a viable idea. Not that I wish it on other people, but you must realise that Portsmouth is one of the most densely populated cities in the UK, an island city accessed by only two roads. Among the multitude of other reasons why the interconnector is unviable is the extreme disruption it will cause to traffic build-up on Eastern Road, and the excess pollution that will be caused in an already polluted city if traffic moves to the M275.

Yours sincerely,
