I refer to the attached letter. I can confirm that Durham County Council has no objections to the adequacy of the consultation exercises undertaken by Highways England in regards to the A19 Downhill Lane Junction proposals. In specific regard to Durham County Council I concur with Highways England within their consultation report document that Durham County Council are not a necessary/statutory consultee having particular regards to the Planning Act 2008 Sections 42, 43 and 47 but rather that Highways England consulted Durham on a more voluntary basis.

Thank you
Henry
