Dear Team,

There is no mention in the enclosed document relevant to my request that only personnel capable of respecting the religious and otherwise spiritual nature of Stonehenge and nearby monuments are given the task of deciding on their future and the landscaping near them.

Please say why that is.

Sincerely,

Rosemary Jones.

Dear Richard.

Thank you for your email.

Please let me know if the Inspectors comprising the Examining Authority are responsible for waiving prerequisite qualifications or specialisms for participating in this sort of decision making, and, if not, who is.

It seems extraordinary that any aspect relating to Stonehenge should be evaluated by people who are not comprehensively trained to make such an evaluation.

It is like asking a member of the public to practice medicine when they have not studied what they need to know to do that with any degree of safely.

Thank you.

Rosemary.

Dear Rosemary

Thank you for your email.

The Infrastructure Planning (Examination Procedure) Rules 2010 establish the procedure for examining Nationally Significant Infrastructure Projects. They do not establish prerequisite qualifications or specialisms for officers or Inspectors.

The Inspectors comprising the Examining Authority were appointed by the Secretary of State for Housing, Communities and Local Government in careful consideration paras 12, 13 and 14 of relevant statutory guidance, available here:

Surely the exam rules must specify that only officers trained in historic site assessments are allowed to deal with this. The training must include core subjects such as EARTH ENERGIES and LEY LINES.

Please let me know if these are included.

Rosemary Jones.
