Subject: Delay in the Project

The longer this project is delayed the more pollution is created by all the standing traffic that passes Stonehenge. The delays for traffic on this important route must be costing the economy a lot.

It beggars belief to me that some minority group could create more cost and delay (and that some judge accepted their arguments against all common sense). Why does parliament not create a new statute to make the project start and stop wasting more taxpayers money?

It is frustrating in this country how major projects face so many delays all the time due to massively extended consultation periods. I think this one has been over 30 years.
