This proposal has ignored all decisions and protests levelled against the original scheme which was vetoed earlier in the year. The original objections regarding damage to a World Heritage Site and its Hinterland, have not gone away and the idiotic scheme is being relaunched as if nothing has happened. It's like a nagging toddler renewing its plea for treats on the grounds that Mummy has forgotten why she said "no" before. Mummy has NOT forgotten and the answer is STILL "NO".

It was a daft scheme in the first place, has been proven to be dafter than at first thought and becomes obvious that those with much to gain from the contracts awardable have donated even more to the Conservative Party. Planting trees on the sides of the A303 to shield vision of traffic driving east into the rising sun or west into the setting sun would be much cheaper and more useful.
