Dear Sirs

I have often travelled the A 303 past the wonderful Stonehenge ancient site

I have considered the fact that someone wants to build a tunnel to increase the traffic flow ,which I like because I can spend time looking at the impressive monument.

Why can't highways widen the existing road to a dual carriageway using the agricultural land beside the existing road

This would be less expensive than a tunnel and solve the problem without tearing up all the strong energy lines that run below the existing road

Thank you for reading this email

Yours sincerely
