No tunnel should form part of any scheme to improve road traffic near Stonehenge, as a tunnel is unnecessary. A new scheme, as simple and practical as possible, should be devised and implemented, with a result which will save the integrity of Stonehenge as a world class site and improve the traffic situation, at an overall cost much less than including a tunnel.

Campaigns by the National Trust, of which I am a member, and by English Heritage have been seriously misplaced and unsuitable.

I am [REDACTED] and am saddened that a simple, practical and comparatively inexpensive scheme has not by now been devised and agreed by lovers of the environment and our heritage.
