Dear A303Stonehenge@planninginspectorate.gov.uk

I work for English Heritage and feel very strongly about preserving the natural landscape of historical sites.

I oppose any planned road scheme whether a long tunnel, a southwest cutting or any extra road cutting adjoining the Stone Henge Site. We are suppose to be cutting down on carbon footprint not increasing it. The site as it stands and has stood for thousands of years should remain as it is, undisturbed and preserved in its present state. No more roads, tunnels or bypasses are necessary.

Given the way transport is going with all new regulations, restrictions being put in place and eventually banning petrol vehicles and discouraging personal ownership of any car or vehicle, particularly for the normal working person, there will be a huge reduction in the volume of traffic travelling long distances, thus it is not necessary to devastate more countryside and ruin a beautiful heritage site by adding yet another road, bypass or long tunnel in any direction whatsoever (whether that be North, South, SouthWest, East etc ..).

Money could be spent on a more worthy cause that does not involve devastating a beautiful site.

Kind Regards

T Franks
