Dear Sir/Madam,

Please listen to the people you represent. Until recently our family lived in Wiltshire, near Avebury. I'm very opposed to the plans for a dual carriageway near Stonehenge.

What a blot and eye sore it would be on the landscape, not to mention the costs, which could better spent on other things. There's also a real danger that archaeological and historical aspects to this area could be put at risk for ever. It will encourage more traffic too. The current road is not a of any real impact on Stonehenge, not being very noticeable or noisy from there, and it's a pleasure to see it in the distance, when you're driving along.

Please leave this sight alone; getting traffic moving faster isn't the most important factor here or elsewhere for that matter. Other considerations are far more important. Why not consider planting some trees or more hedges along the carriageway; this would reduce noise and pollution from vehicles, kind regards,

Ruth Scriven
