I'm sure there are other routes that can be explored, or exploited.

Anyone whom chooses to stand by this vicious intrusion of our collective heritage is dealing with the ineffable powers of our innate heritage that so many take for granted.

They're not just a bunch of standing stones.

They are more than that.

Having been up close and personal with them I feel that irreversible damage could befall our Country as a consequence.

These people whom have chosen to put this Heritage Site in harms way are young and arrogant souls whom "Know what not they do".

Even on a cold November, day and night, in 1996 these stones were warm to the touch.

I can't hope that these so called people will ever see sense because it's about 'route expediency' and nothing is allowed to interfere or intrude on their appalling mindset.
