Hello

I live at [REDACTED] where you are planning on digging the tunnel under. I'd prefer it if you didn't.

Creating two tunnel portals and two 1km long dual carriageway trenches within the borders of the Stonehenge World Heritage Site is a bad idea on many levels.

The ever-escalating cost (£1.7Bn and rising), along with the fact that UNESCO, the Examining Authority and a Judicial Review all came down against the scheme (the Judicial Review judge said the Sec. of State had acted irrationally and erred in law).

I value the casual, free, encounter with Stonehenge you get via the existing road that'll be lost forever once a tunnel is put in place.

Please come to your senses, use that money to help people pay their heating and gas bills, and home the homeless, but don't waste it on a useless hole that no one wants

Hugh Newman
