

From: [REDACTED]
To: A303 Stonehenge
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Stonehenge road "improvements".
Date: 03 April 2022 20:38:18

---

Dear Planning Inspectorate,

Having tried to avert the crisis that looms over us all for most of my adult life--a complete waste of my life to date, as generations of planners, politicians and developers, have always carried on with pouring the concrete like there's no tomorrow: now you are doing it even faster, because you can see perfectly well, that all the signs, from many branches of science, show that, by the end of the century, for Humanity, there will be no tomorrow.

You could try to prevent this; you could actually start doing what your name says, and start planning, even at this late stage, some schemes to avert the worst, by reducing our dependence on fossil fuels and just in time transport in the precarious struggle to keep a grossly unsustainable population fed, as the world burns and its soils disappear, and the oceans empty of fish. You could slap punitive taxes on commuting; invest in rail freight instead of developer led land grabbing schemes like HS2, and Stonehenge, and ever more airport expansions, that just encourage ever more commuting for longer and longer distances, at greater and greater speeds; all just to serve the ever growing and metastasising cancer that is London Metro.

You could change all this: but I have no doubt, that you will carry on as you always have done.

Some future species of intelligent creature that is evolved, like a new wave of dinosaurs, for a very hot planet with no ice cover, may discover the cause of the Earth's second Great Dying. But it won't be for a VERY long time, if politicians and planners go right on ignoring the warnings that are plain to see.

Thankfully, I didn't have any children.
Will yours ever forgive you?

Faithfully,

Steve Hawkins