My honourable friends

Our ancient heritage sites must be protected at all costs.
Imagine a ski slope down the great pyramids and that is how sacrilege
It would be to even consider to invade the very foundations of our ancient Monument. A wonder of the world. We should be proud of it not laying roads under, over or around it.

I speak for many others who find this monument both fascinating and spiritual. As a young child I went and it was a time when we could just all sit around this fabulous henge, I hoped to take my grandchildren so they can experience the quieter spiritual atmosphere.
There's a fence around it now. A road would just be the end of an experience every child in the United Kingdom would never experience again. What a disaster to our heritage.
Sadly there are a minority who think the stones are put up every year just for the solstice.
But that huge problem is down to the education department.

This is a plea to stop the road, any road, from being laid anywhere near this magnificent heritage site of importance to England

Yours faithfully

Dawn Tibble
