To whom it may concern,

I think the National highways should take into account UNSECO's suggestions and not stick to its' unsuitable plans. Stonehenge has stood for thousands of years and the road won't even last a hundred years! What does National Highways mean by more growth and benefit to the monument? From my perpespective more cars will cause more pollution and this will help to destroy the monument.

Basically national highways are just thinking of the expense. Be assured that the friends of the monument will fight their plans until we win.

I was a lucky person in that when I visited the monument I was able to touch and be near the stones. They have an amazing energy, Why do people want to destroy something so special and part of our history for saving money!

Kind regards
