Hello Ann-Marie Trevelyan,

The wider Stonehenge site needs to be properly protected from us and our need for roads. It is a World Heritage site. It is important to our understanding of the humans who built it and who happened to live in what became known as England. After all these thousands of years, don't let us destroy the further evidence we can glean from the wider landscape. Please listen to the archaeologists and UNESCO. Do we really want the ignominy of Stonehenge being on a World Heritage in Danger List? We are supposed to be a responsible and civilised country.

Thank you, Kate Ibbotson
