To all Deciders,

Given the necessity to construct a new two-lane carriage way for the A303, which is not really being contested, two possibilities exist:

- the worst scenario would be a planning decision which “carved in stone” an aesthetic error, visible, heard and felt by generations, locally and world-wide
- the ‘best’ scenario is to build further south or at the very least extend the western limit of the tunnel.

Of course the cost is a major consideration, but when any ‘extra’ cost is 'smoothed out' over generations it is reduced proportionally - and becomes, even, an investment.

All the art will be in making the right decision.

Just do it!

Yours faithfully,

Jane Magnaldo
