Dear Sirs,

I do not understand why such a scheme is even being considered. Rather than encouraging more flights we should be concentrating on reducing our impact on the environment. Expansion of the airport is madness and will lead to the ever increasing speed at which we are destroying our planet. Does nobody care about the damage we're inflicting on future generations?

Planes should be made more environmentally friendly and the amount of noise they make reduced before any consideration is given to expansion. I live in a small village directly under the flight path and the number of planes going overhead and at low altitude has increased significantly since I first came here. We also have to tolerate the noise from early in the morning until late at night. The ambient noise in towns means that the noise and disturbance from the planes is far less noticeable but in a very quiet village it is very intrusive.

Please take the intelligent and long-sighted view on this matter and do not let this expansion happen.

Yours faithfully,

Marilyn Packman
