To whom it may concern

Further to the Manston DCO hearings this week. I would like to ask - why when the Government has declared a Climate Emergency is a new freight hub leading to even more pollution even being considered at all?

If it is being considered, why is it being considered in South East England in a location which is 270 degrees surrounded by water, and where freight is going to be trucked, predominantly to the North of England?

Isn't that just more pollution from Air Traffic and more pollution for Road Traffic?

If there is really a need for a cargo hub - which I do NOT believe there is as there is a lot more capacity elsewhere - Why not just locate the cargo hub in the North of England and fly straight there? (

Kind regards
