Dear Sirs,

Poor roads in Thanet are down to Kent County Council's mismanagement and under funding of the roads in Thanet, and the poor infrastructure put in by them, you just need to look at WestWood X as an example of how idiotic Kent County Council had poorly planned the road infrastructure from beginning to now.

I cannot see any impact on passengers using Thanet's roads to get to Manston Airport for residents of Thanet and other road users.

The A299, better known as the Thanet Way, is a major road in the county of Kent, England, and runs from Brenley Corner near Faversham to Ramsgate via Whitstable and Herne Bay. It is predominantly used for freight traffic to Ramsgate Harbour and local traffic to Thanet, and is 22 miles long. (Source Wikipedia)

This road runs adjacent to the airport as a dual carriageway, it links Thanet to the A2/M2 as well as the M20, which would be the main corridor for road users from outside Thanet that would want to use Manston Airport.

In no way would the proposed extra traffic impinge on us who live here and they would not have to put up with the poor road system that Kent County Council has underinvested in Thanet in over the past 20 years.

I look forward to the airport hopefully returning to full aviation use as do most of Thanet residents.

Many thanks

Mike Jackson
