To whom it may concern.

I write in support of opening Manston airport again.

Britain needs to look at opening new global trade and the airport will aid transport of goods.

It will also create jobs in an area that desperately needs them.

Infrastructure for transport has been upgraded and it will now be able to bring in and out freight far faster than any other airport near London.

Goods could be moved across the continent via rail too from incoming flights like Canada and the US.

Goods could also be redirected amalgamating like goods or delivery areas to airfields in the north off England and Scotland helping ease congestion on the roads in the west of London.

This is an opportunity for local people but also will become a national asset.

I hope you will allow it to reopen.
