So here we go again, yet another report into the viability of an airport at Manston with exactly the same conclusion. This the eleventh one. Yes, eleven as in 11. Manston Airport lost over £100 million in It's short life (15 years) as a commercial airport because it is/was in a terrible location to run a commercial airport. Before this latest report we had 10 (ten, to avoid doubt) previous reports alluding to the fact that Manston is in fact a terrible place to have Manston Airport. May I suggest that before anyone commissions yet another report, in the unfathomable hope that Manston isn't now in a terrible location to run an airport, to rename 'East Midlands' to 'Manston', thus ensuring that Manston would no longer be in a terrible location to run an airport.

Best regards
