To the Manston Airport Planning Inspectorate,

Riveroak Strategic Partners' (RSP) proposal was given the go-ahead by the national government last year, despite its own Planning Inspectorate recommending a rejection.

An independent aviation assessor was then asked to advise on matters relating to the need for the development—the recommendation was a rejection again.

The people of Thanet - and the UK more widely - do not need another failed airport that will ultimately cause the economy and the environment more harm. They need something viable.

Riveroak Strategic Partners (RSP), a group of international investors ultimately controlled by an offshore company headquartered in the British Virgin Islands—do they really have the best interests of the people of Thanet in mind? My strong sense is that they have their own commercial interests in mind, and I see very limited evidence that their interests co-incide with the interests of the people of Thanet.

All the best,

Daniel Pearson
