

Its impossible for the layperson / general public to understand this wording.

As a local resident how can we possibly comment?

I am furious that local people are not commenting because nobody can understand this process.

I would like to know how you will address how the noise is affecting mine and many other people's mental health. Its already unbearable, more flights would be a disaster for anyone sensitive to the noise.

Asides from my mental anguish I am really concerned about the contribution to more carbon emissions and the lack of environmental assessments to the direct impacts on climate change.

Why is there no carbon cap? Surely if you think there are greener fuels why not agree to a carbon cap?

Greener fuels are still not available in any quantity and won't be for many years to come. The impact on air pollution will be worse with any increase of flights. This directly impacts local people, especially children with underdeveloped lungs.

Hopefully a carbon tax will be introduced so the cost of flights will go up so less people will reguarly fly. Sadly most people dont truley understand the effects of climate breakdown. Scientists who do are deeply troubled. The idea of any airport expansions at this time is nothing short of madness.
