Dear Sirs

I wrote to you as part of the planning process on April 8th this year, questioning the usefulness of the northern runway at a time when 14000 flights had been cancelled due to airspace restrictions.

I have read today that the government has given permission for additional flights to and from London City Airport to allow an extra 2.5 million passengers to use that airport. Surely this is just going to restrict airspace even further?

Is there any sort of national planning going on and is there any reference to the net zero plan?

Kind regards

Mathew Lowe
