I have doubts of the developers claims that thousands of new jobs will be formed.
How has this been qualified/ substantiated?

Experience tells me that many of these jobs will be agency workers not directly employed members of staff.

They will be bussed in from neighbouring cities such as Coventry , Leicester and Birmingham - adding to the traffic and not offering job opportunities to local people. Working for a major international distribution company currently with two large hubs in Hinckley [one until recently was the largest distribution warehouse in Western Europe] it is clear that despite making similar employment promise on the original planning application - jobs for local people, this just didn't happen with them now employing 80% of their workforce from afar and all of them working for agencies on Zero Hours contracts.

Kind Regards

Andrew MacGregor
